WEST OVERTON VILLAGE (SCOTTDALE)

Thomas White said that stories abound at this historic village, which is one of the few remaining examples of a pre-Civil War industrial village. The town was founded by Henry Overholt in 1800 and the upper floor of the old Overbrook homestead house is reputed to be haunted. Clyde Overholt shot himself there in 1921 and people claim his spirit remains, while others even say they've heard a gunshot coming from the upstairs. Others report to have heard old-fashioned phones ringing despite the absence of any such devices in the house. There is also said to be a woman in white — who some believe is Helen Clay Frick — walking around the property. One staff member saw a shadowy figure walk into an office and vanish despite the door being locked. The old distillery is also supposed to be haunted by a grumpy spirit who has told employees to get out and even tossed a visitor's camera to the floor, an event witnessed by multiple people. The home of Christian Overholt is supposedly haunted by a shadowy figure wearing a hat who appeared before reenactors in 2006 and walked past as if supervising what was going on.
